Biographical/Historical Note

Dr. Sandra Featherman was born in Pennsylvania in 1934. She received her BA, MA and PhD in City and Regional Planning from the University of Pennsylvania. Trained as a political scientist, Dr. Featherman's areas of expertise are in urban politics, ethnic voting, diversity issues, women's leadership and healthcare. Dr. Featherman's academic career and public service has spanned over three decades. Her career in academia began at Temple University in Philadelphia in 1974, where she taught political science and later served as president of the faculty senate, director of the Center for Public Policy and assistant to the president. From 1991-1995, Featherman was vice chancellor for academic administration and professor of political science at the University of Minnesota Duluth (UMD). In 1995, Featherman became president of the University of New England (UNE) in Portland and Biddeford, Maine. Upon her retirement in 2006, the University of New England's Board of Trustees named her President Emeritus. Featherman published more than 50 academic publications, as well as numerous magazine and newspaper articles. She also lectured on the topic of women and leadership at several national organizations. In addition to her work in academia, Featherman was an active member of many non-profit organizations, such as the American Association of University Women (AAUW), American Council on Education (ACE), American Osteopathic Association (AOA), City of Philadelphia School Board Nominating Panel, Samuel Fels Fund, Maine Community Foundation and Pennsylvania Council on the Arts and the (Maine) Governor's Blue Ribbon Task Force on Health Care. Her awards included the Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania, Administrator of the Year from Minnesota Women in Higher Education, and the Woman of Distinction Award from the International Women's Forum. Dr. Featherman married Bernard Featherman and had two sons, Andrew and John. At the time of her death in 2018, she resided in Highland Beach, Florida and Kennebunkport, Maine.

Collection Scope and Content

The Sandra Featherman papers consist of published academic papers, correspondence, speeches, news clippings and conference programs documenting her academic career and public service from 1967-2008, as well as a small amount of personal correspondence. The collection is arranged into seven series. Series 1, Biographical Materials, is primarily composed of newspaper clippings containing quotes from Dr. Featherman on the topics of Philadelphia politics, public education, ethnic voting and women in academia, as well as articles regarding her time at Temple University, UMD and UNE. Many articles are personal interviews from local newspapers in Minnesota and Maine. Series 2, Correspondence, is the most comprehensive series within the Sandra Featherman papers. The materials within this series include letters, e-mails, invitations, notes and cards from Featherman's colleagues at Temple University, UMD and UNE, academics at other institutions, George Herbert Walker Bush, Maine politicians, former students and colleagues at non-profit organizations. This series also contains a small amount of outgoing correspondence from Dr. Featherman. Series 3, Organizational Involvement, includes meeting minutes, news bulletins, newsletters and annual reports from Featherman's affiliation with many non-profit organizations, such as the AAUW, American Association of Colleges of Osteopathic Medicine, Pennsylvania Humanities Council and the Blue Ribbon Commission Panel on Dirigo Health. Series 4, Presentations, contains conference agendas, itineraries and programs, lecture flyers and speeches made by Dr. Featherman. In addition to her lectures at Temple, UMD and UNE, Dr. Featherman was also a frequent speaker at many conferences, including those hosted by the AAUW, ACE and the Pennsylvania Humanities Council. Series 5, Temple University, contains flyers and press releases on Dr. Featherman's lectures and courses and the Featherman Lecture Series. This series also includes minutes from Faculty Senate meetings, and miscellaneous memos and notes from Temple faculty and staff. Series 6, University of New England (UNE), is composed of various publications such as annual reports, commencement programs, magazines, newsletters and internal administrative reports. Series 7, Publications, is the second largest series of the collection and is composed of 58 folders. These folders include academic papers, newspaper and newsletter articles, abstracts and handwritten notes published by Dr. Featherman.

Biographical Information, 1976-2008, undated

Scope and Contents

This series contains biographical information on Dr. Sandra Featherman, as found in newspaper clippings, magazine articles and newsletters. In these materials, Dr. Featherman discusses her life as a feminist and political analyst, sharing her insights and expertise experience on topics such as the role of race and gender in higher education and politics. The series consists of 17 folders, beginning with her early work in academia in the 1970s on ethnic voting patterns and residential abandonment in Philadelphia while at Temple University. Featherman left Temple to serve as vice chancellor for academic administration and professor of political science at the University of Minnesota Duluth. Shortly after she accepted the position at UMD in the summer of 1992, she received several written threats from an anonymous individual in an attempt to discourage her from promoting diversity and improving conditions for women and minorities at the University. This incident was widely covered in the Minnesota press. Other highlights of this series include a 1991 Applause magazine article on Philadelphia political analysts featuring Dr. Featherman. The series also contains many newspaper clippings from the Maine press regarding Featherman's 1995 presidential inauguration at University of New England, the 1996 merger of UNE and Westbrook College and her retirement from UNE in 2005.

Correspondence, 1967-2006

Scope and Contents

The correspondence series represents the largest series within the collection and is composed of 47 separate folders. Materials within this series include typewritten and handwritten letters, cards, notes and e-mail messages from Dr. Featherman's academic colleagues, employees and students spanning nearly forty years. Featherman corresponded with several well-known political figures, including Wilson Goode, Philadelphia's first African-American mayor, Maine Senators Olympia Snowe and Susan Collins, and former US President (and fellow Kennebunkport resident) George Herbert Walker Bush. Also of note is Featherman's correspondence with W.T.M. Johnson, with whom she provided research on at large elections within the African-American community of Chester County, Pennsylvania. The result of her research was instrumental in the Stively Decision of September 1987, which overturned At Large elections in West Chester, Chester County, Pennsylvania.

Presentations, 1973-2007

Scope and Contents

Throughout her career, Dr. Featherman's expertise in higher education management and as a political scientist has made her a frequent speaker at many conferences. In addition to speeches given at Temple, UMD and UNE, Featherman has given lectures for groups such as the AAUW, ACE and the Pennsylvania Humanities Council on the topics of the U.S. Constitution, public policy, women's leadership in academia and ethnic voting patterns. She has also provided commentary for radio programs and television programs. In 1986, Featherman had the distinction of introducing anti-apartheid activist and Nobel Prize Laureate Bishop Desmond Tutu at a Temple University event, where he was bestowed with an honorary degree. Her remarks from this event are included within this series. Also of note is a lecture Dr. Featherman presented in conjunction with Temple University and the Jewish History Museum of Philadelphia on her experience as a panelist at the 1985 United Nations' "Decade for Women" Conference in Nairobi, Kenya, where she spoke on the importance of designing an electoral system for women's maximum legislative participation.

Temple University, 1978-2006

Scope and Contents

This small series contains materials from Featherman's long career at Temple University. The eight folders which compose this series also contain meeting minutes, teaching evaluations and flyers for the Featherman Lecture Series on Public Policy, established by Featherman and her husband, Bernard. Featherman was initially hired at Temple as a Political Science professor, then went on to serve in administrative roles as president of the Faculty Senate, director of the Center of the Public Policy and assistant to the president. While at Temple, she frequently lectured on housing affordability for middle-class families, environmental policy and ethnic voting patterns. During this time, she and her husband, Bernard, established the Featherman Lecture Series on Public Policy.
