Biographical / Historical

Burton Trafton, Jr. (1925-1990) was a researcher and school counselor from Jewett's hometown of South Berwick, Maine. His father and mother were significant members of The Old Berwick Historical Society. He was the husband of Mervin Bronson. In 1949, for the centennial of Jewett's birth, Trafton wrote a guest editorial on Jewett in the Boston Sunday Post. Also in 1949, Trafton edited a reissue of Jewett's posthumous poetry collection, Verses, (American Weave Press, originally published in 1916) for which he wrote an introduction. He wrote his 1957 master's thesis from the University of New Hampshire on Jewett materials he collected. Trafton maintained a long-time friendship and correspondence with MWWC founder and curator, Dorothy Healy, and when Trafton died in 1990, he donated a large quantity of Jewett materials to the MWWC, including all of Jewett's private library, Jewett's parlor couch, Jewett's elementary school teacher's (Miss Raynes) desk, and a stained glass, black metal "wreath" by Sarah Wyman Whitman. Trafton was a lifelong, passionate, and eloquent advocate for Jewett.
